

Once a Murderer

Én gang morder

by Eva Maria Fredensborg

SPECIFICATIONS

Pages: 352

A Danish psychiatrist comes to Småland, -Sweden to teach a summer course, but when he wakes up the next morning, there is a white envelope on the doorstep of the rented house. It contains a photograph of a serial killer who took his own life while he was under the care of the psychiatrist twenty years prior. The next morning a woman is found murdered.

What looks like an ideal case for the Danish profiler, Robert Strand, quickly develops into a nightmare, as it turns out that he only has five days to prevent the serial killer's copy cat from striking again. This is Eva Maria Fredensborg's debut.

Eva Maria Fredensborg was born in 1969 in Härnösand, Sweden, and has worked as a strategic planner in the advertising industry. In 2013 she debuted with the crime novel Én gang morder [Once a Murderer], followed by Min mund er lukket [My Lips Are Sealed] (2014) and I blinde [In the Dark] (2015). These three crime novels make up a trilogy featuring the characters Robert Strand, Asta Qvist and Carl Pedersen, and rights have been sold to Italy (Atmosphere Libri) and Germany (Goldmann).

With The White Darkness Fredensborg embarks on a new chapter in her writing and a new genre.

Reviews

A masterful plot and a string of interesting characters. There are no quiet passages in the book, it is constantly evolving, keeping pace and power. And well written in a simple, unaffected manner. All in all a very good experience - a modern and captivating thriller

- Politiken

Eva Maria Fredensborg writes well and easily ... an excellent and thorough crime debut

- Femina

A number of Swedish authors have tried to write lucrative homeland novels without succeeding even half as good as Eva Maria Fredensborg
